

Joyce L Washington

April 20, 1955 - December 26, 2021

We are here today for the homegoing of Joyce L. Washington born on April 20th 1955 in Indianapolis, Indiana. Joyce was a giver, a woman who didn't know the word hate. She graduated from Arsenal Tech High School. Joyce loved helping anyone and everyone in need it didn't matter if she knew them or not if she had it to give, she gave it. Her love for helping others took her into the health care field where she worked as a CNA for over 30 years. A strong religious woman who was not only a great mother. She was also a great wife, aunt, and friend. She leaves to cherish her loving memories: Her daughter Daytona Keith and her brother Paul Keith (Estella), also Uyvette Keith, Regina Woodson, and Odlawn Keith (Karen) that she loved and helped raised like her own children and a host of other family and friends.

Strength

You got your wings last night; it was a blessing yet scary sight. I seen you struggle and I watched you fight as God took your hand, and lead you to the light. Your work on earth is finally done, rest in peace, momma for a job well done. You gave us all your very best now it's time to relax and enjoy your rest.

“ Aunt Joyce I miss our talks on the phone and how you would remind me just how much I was loved. You and my mom are together again the dynamic duo. The one thing that makes me smile the most is knowing that you became another guardian angel like the rest to watch over us. It will never ever be goodbye it is until we reunite again. Our family reunion in heaven. We will never ever stop loving you and our other angels we lost hugs kisses and love for you all. Tell my mom we see her smiling thru the sunshine. Although I can no longer see you I can surely feel your love. Our last talk I will forever treasure. Spread your wings my Favorite we love you.
